

Seeds for Change

They help local community groups, national campaign networks, co-operatives or charities to become more strategic, inclusive and sustainable

From their website: "We work with groups and organisations fighting to defend their communities, stopping environmental devastation and creating socially just and sustainable alternatives.

We offer training, meeting facilitation and online resources on collective organising and consensus decision making, developing your strategy, campaign and action skills, setting up groups and co-ops, co-operative governance and training for trainers.

We live in a world in which humans and ecosystems are exploited for the sake of greed and power, and we believe that to create real change, we need to come together to confront injustice and build alternatives.

Seeds for Change exists to support groups who are trying to do just that, and who share our core values of equality, freedom and solidarity - for human beings, other animals and the ecosystems we are part of.

We are a workers' co-op of experienced campaigners and co-operators. We offer training, facilitation, online resources and other support for campaigns, community groups and co-operatives".
