

Centre for Sustainable Fashion

Centre for Sustainable Fashion (CSF) is a Research Centre of the University of the Arts London based at London College of Fashion.

Established in 2008 by Dilys Williams, actively supported by other key change-makers from fashion and beyond, CSF's starting point was human and ecological resilience as a lens for design in fashion's artistic and business practices. The Centre has developed into a community of cross-discipline collaborations and ecology-centred thinkers, made up of world leading researchers, designers, educators and communicators enabling us to: -create internationally acclaimed research-set agendas in government, business and public arenas-pioneer world relevant curriculum Fashion shapes and reflects society and communities, their culture and diversity, it is both personal and ubiquitous, an every day phenomenon. CSF was devised to question and challenge reactionary fashion cultures, which reflect and re-enforce patterns of excessive consumption and disconnection, to expand fashion's ability to connect, delight and identify individual and collective values.
